Environmental Law and the Challenges of the Decades Ahead: Promoting Transformative and Recovery Responses to the Planetary Emergency

VI Tarragona International Environmental Law Colloquium (TIEC)
14, 15 and 16 June 2021 - Universitat Rovira i Virgili (Tarragona)

Concept

In 2020, the consequences of the process of the aggressive colonization of the planet began to be perceived in a threatening way due to the pandemic outbreak. In this regard, it has been shown that human induced climate change and biodiversity loss are playing a relevant role in the spread of zoonotic diseases, like the SARS outbreak in 2003, the spill-over of the ebola virus, and the spread of COVID-19 in 2020. In this vein, the COVID-19 pandemic not only emphasizes the delicate interdependence between human economy and wellbeing, and the ecosystems, but also puts the spotlight on the consequences that human actions are having on humans, non-human species, and also on the environment. Due to the human-environment interdependence, the COVID-19 crisis has had cascading effects on the economy and has exacerbated existing social and gender inequalities, violence, and injustices.

All this seems to suggest a complete failure of the adaptation and mitigation system in the face of a planetary emergency.

The VI TIEC aims to reflect on the existing barriers for systemic approaches and the identification of practical and practicable solutions to transform and recover from current critical times. We encourage authors to submit abstracts that address one of the following topics:

1. The context and status of Environmental Law in raising the planetary emergency.
2. Actions, measures and immediate responses to cope with the current critical times.
3. Imagining alternative pathways and taking action.

Aim:

The VI TIEC aims to provide a forum for junior and early-career researchers with different backgrounds to present and discuss their research and works-in-progress. This event seeks to create a friendly environment for meeting fellow students and colleagues that share a common interest in environmental law.

Organizers

The VI TIEC is jointly organized by:

The Tarragona Centre for Environmental Law Studies (CEDAT-URV). CEDAT is a research centre which has gradually become a reference point for environmental law in Spain and Europe. Its objectives are to generate and socialize knowledge in the field of environmental law. At present, it is involved in several national and international research projects.

The Tarragona Environmental Law Students Association (AAEDAT). AAEDAT is an association founded in 2009 by students and ex-students of the LLM in Environmental Law at Rovira i Virgili University. This association aims to promote activities within the university community in order to further spread environmental values and to create spaces for debate, reflection and exchange with other universities and research groups.
